New baby – not a job for sissies

Our fifth grandchild arrived just a few weeks ago, and as I watch my daughter, and help when I can, I'm struck once again by how hard it is to be a new parent. While I empathize with my daughter, I revel in being a grandmother. And apparently, we're not the only species with this helpful relationship >>

Kindergartners: State of the State

How do Alaska's kindergartners measure up REALLY? Thanks to a revised assessment of children as they enter kindergarten – a process implemented this past year – we should have a better sense of our children's skills, knowledge, and abilities. See how our children stack up statewide >>

Adding value to Imagination Library

Imagination Library is not just a book delivery program; it's a Get-the-Whole-Community-Involved-in-Reading-to-Kids Program! Family nights, storytimes, big kick-offs, and Book Bashes – read about the ways communities help Imagination Library books come alive >>

America's Children & the Recession

How are America's children being affected by the Great Recession of 2008-2009? Children under 18 are the single largest group in America living in poverty, but what about health, emotional/spiritual well-being, and social relationships during recessions?
